

allowing cell phone calls while flying would not be a good idea. imagine in an emergency landing, instead of passengers listening to the commands of the flight crew, they were calling loved ones and not focusing on the importance of the flight crew information, causing potential chaos resulting in unnecessary injury and death. Or on a lighter note, put yourself on a late night flight east to west coast your very tired and want to sleep, but the guy next to you is loudly talking to whoever on his phone for the entire flight....ouch. Lastly, there is a terrorist in first class scouting out the passengers as well as the crew, he now is able to communicate vital info to others who may be seated elsewhere. I say no to cell phones in the sky.

hours at a time